Risk and reward profile

Historical data as used in the calculation of the synthetic risk and reward indicator may not be a reliable indication of the future risk profile of the subfund. The risk and reward category illustrated above is not guaranteed to remain unchanged. A classification of the subfund in the lowest category does not imply a risk-free investment.

Risk classification of the subfund

The strategy of the sub-fund invests in different assets and derivatives. Due to the relatively low volatility of these investments the fund is classified into risk category 3.

Other relevant risks

The credit standing (ability and willingness to pay) of the originators of the securities held by the subfund and its strategy can deteriorate in time. In the extreme event that the originator of a security is forced to declare insolvency, the securities can be subject to significant decreases in value. This may result in losses in the subfund's market price that exceed general market fluctuations.

The subfund's performance and the ability to purchase, sell or redeem fund units can be impaired by economic developments and elements of uncertainty such as political developments, shifts in government politics, introduction of constraints to flows of capital and modifications of regulatory requirements. Furthermore, events such as natural catastrophes and political unrest can have negative implications.

In unfavourable market conditions, it may prove difficult to sell securities held by the subfund without incurring significant losses or even impossible to sell certain securities at all. In the extreme case this may result in payment difficulties on behalf of the subfund, which would make it impossible for you to redeem all units you hold immediately or without significant losses.

The subfund can engage in derivative transactions and is thus subject to the risk of a counterparty not honouring its contractual obligations. We reduce counterparty risks in any derivatives transactions by requiring our contractual counterparty to provide minimum collateral as specified by the respective regulatory requirements.

The subfund can potentially incur losses due to the failure or inadequacy of internal procedures, systems, employees or external events. This comprises the possibility of losses due to the violation of current regulatory requirements, including losses caused by regulatory changes on existing transactions.

Derivates are subject to specific risks resulting from the so-called leverage effect, which results in a higher change in the market price of a derivative due to a change in the market price of the underlying. This results in an increasing risk of loss with an increasing degree of leverage inherent to a derivative.

Please refer to the risk section of the fund prospectus for more detailed informations regarding the subfund's risk profile.
